Describes Practice Cruise of New 41,000-ton U. S. Battleship--Mightiest Fighting Craft on Oceans

EDITOR'S NOTE: A new U. S. battleship is almost ready to start slugging it out with the enemy. The following, written during a gunnery practice cruise, tells why the giant dreadnaght may be expected to play a sizeable role in the war despite modern emphasis on air power.

By SANDOR S. KLEIN
(UP Staff Correspondent)

ABOARD A NEW U. S. BATTLESHIP AT SEA—(Delayed)—Another U. S. battleship, 41,000 tons of sudden death, is in commission and almost ready to join the U. S. fleet.

It may now be revealed that this huge floating fortress, believed to be the match of any man-of-war afloat, was placed in commission months ago.

Since then, she has been engaged in training her crew, sharpening her gunnery, making up-to-the-minute improvements, shaking out defects that invariably crop up when a warship is in her infancy.

I am in a position to state that it will do the enemy no good to come within range of this ship's nine 16-inch guns—it's bad enough to be behind them when they fire.

On a day when the big guns were unlimbered in a practice cruise against a distant target, I was standing on a conning tower platform, all eyes and ears. Some moments, I was clawing for the rail with one hand and trying to get control of the other, which had been lifted as though grasped by an unseen giant.

The guns had been firing, first singly and then in pairs, for several minutes. Then of a sudden all nine were fired at once. The blast hit me with stunning force. My legs

SUPREME COURT TO GET STEPHAN TREASON CASE

Attorney Says He'll Appeal After Circuit Jurists Uphold Death Penalty.

(By International News Service)

DETROIT — The case of Max Stephan, Detroit German-born restaurant proprietor who was sentenced to hang for treason, will be carried to the United States supreme court, Nick Salowich, Stephan's attorney, declared today.

Salowich immediately started mapping plans for a new appeal after being informed that the sixth district court of appeals in Cincinnati had affirmed the death sentence meted out last Aug. 6 by Federal Court Judge Arthur J. Tuttle in Detroit.

Stephan was convicted by a federal grand jury of giving aid to Lieut. Hans Peter Krug, a German flier who escaped from a Canadian prison camp and made his way to Detroit. Krug was later captured and returned to Canada.

Appeals Court Confirms Sentence

CINCINNATI—(INS)—The death sentence of Max Stephan, Detroit restaurant owner convicted of treason in assisting a German aviator who had escaped from a Canadian prison camp, today was affirmed by the sixth district U. S. circuit court of appeals.

U. S. District Judge Arthur J. Tuttle sentenced Stephan in Detroit on Aug. 6, last, to be hanged on Nov. 13, but execution of sentence was stayed pending the appeal.

J. W. Menzies, clerk of the appeals court, explained that the mandate of that body now goes back to the Detroit federal district court whose duty it will be to fix a new execution date.

Stephan was the first American citizen to be convicted of treason since the war began. The government charged that he aided Lieut. Hans Peter Krug.

Shelby Officials Pressing U. S. for Water Project Aid

SHELBY—Two Shelby officials and a representative of a Toledo engineering firm conferred with federal works project officials in Columbus today concerning the city's application for a federal grant to finance proposed municipal waterworks improvement at Shelby.

Mayor W. R. Morris and J. P. Adkins, superintendent of municipal utilities were at the conference with the engineers from the H. P. Jones firm of Toledo which mapped plans for the project.

Adkins and the Toledo engineers previously obtained tentative approval from the state health department of plans for the construction of a dam across the Black Fork creek, laying of a 7,500-foot pipeline, and other improvements to the waterworks.

The dam would boost the city's water supply and provide sufficient water for the $3,000,000 army air force supply depot which engineers estimated will require approximately 100,000 gallons of water daily.

SAVED BY BADGE

Boston Policeman Has Close Brush with Death.

BOSTON — (INS) — Patrolman James A. Powers today had his badge to thank for the fact that he was alive.

In shooting it out yesterday with an armed bandit who had commandeered the car of a defense worker, Powers' badge was ripped from his chest by one of the slugs. The bandit, later identified as Robert J. Sullivan, a former taxidriver, was fatally wounded in the exchange of shots.

Actor Waits Jury's Verdict

With the cards propped on his knees, film star Errol Flynn plays solitaire as he waits the verdict of the jury which heard the 17-day trial of rape charges against him. The jury deliberated seven hours yesterday, from 11:21 a. m. to 10 p. m., with time out for a dinner of prime beef steaks on the state. After being locked up for the night, the jury continued its deliberations today.

Week-End Snow, Mercury Drop To Shelve 'February Spring'

Just forget any plans you had to spade a victory garden or probably enjoy a long hike under spring-like skies Sunday.

Much colder weather is forecast for tonight following showers and snow flurries during the day and evening. Ohio's weather predictor promises a very chilly week-end.

Early darkness of Saturday was stabbed by lightning flashes while claps of thunder were heard as accompaniment to rain. Drizzling rain vanished near noon and a sun breaking through overcast skies bore the threat of snow.

Manshelders who have studied various weather signs through the years say that early February thunder bespeaks an early spring. Those who dig in the earth say earthworms now are not more than a foot from the surface—a sure harbinger of a quick end to winter.

Skeptics who frowned at persons doffing overcoats and hats during the last two days will probably revel in a support of their unofficial predictions of week-end winter blasts.

Meanwhile orchardists fear that repeated hard freezes and subsequent thaws have or will seriously reduce the 1943 fruit crop.

For the last 24 hours a high temperature of 51 was recorded by Mansfield's weather observer, with a low of 38, for an average of 44.5 degrees as compared to an 18-year mean of 28.3. At noon it was 45 and there had been .28 inch of rainfall.

Court Dismisses Indictments Against Ohio Fuel Gas Men.

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Eleven present and former officials of the Ohio Fuel Gas company, the Columbus Gas and Electric corporation and subsidiaries were free today of indictments charging them with presentation of false bills and receiving payment for them.

Franklin county Common Pleas Judge Robert P. Duncan ruled on the same case last July holding that there could be no crime charged against the company because the only penalty provided was a prison term and a corporation cannot be imprisoned. At that time he overruled the motion to quash the indictments against the 11 officials and re-heard the cases.

The two indictments charged that about $1500 in bills were presented to the city and payment received for gas at the city hangar at Port Columbus in 1929 and 1930. Duncan's decision said that the defendants were charged only as aiders and abettors and since there was no crime against the company there could be no crime by the officials.

DUCE'S PURGE HINTS SPLIT OVER POLICY

Mussolini Ousts Ciano and 11 Others to Strengthen Pro-Axis Stand.

BULLETIN

NEW YORK —(INS)— Total mobilization of Italian man and woman power was ordered today by Premier Mussolini, the British radio reported in a broadcast heard by CBS. All men between 14 and 70 and all women between 14 and 60 must go into war industries, London declared.

(By International News Service)

LONDON — The sweeping cabinet purge by Mussolini which left only three unimportant posts untouched was interpreted today as evidence of a violent split in the government ranks on questions of internal policy.

In dismissing his son in-law, Count Galeazzo Ciano and eleven others from their posts, Mussolini was also believed to have seized the wrangle over internal matters as an excuse to rid the cabinet of members suspected of being half-hearted in their support of the Axis cause.

Mussolini took over Ciano's duties as minister of foreign affairs and retained his former portfolios of interior, army, navy and air. The only posts not affected were the now honorary colonial ministry, the ministry of agriculture and the ministry of war production.

Next to Ciano, the most important figure to lose his official head was Count Dino Grandi, minister of justice and one-time ambassador to London. Rumors have linked Grandi and Ciano with circles which would welcome a separate peace for Italy.

Brazil Completing Arrest of Nazi Spies; 64 Held.

RIO DE JANEIRO—(INS)—Clean-up of the Nazi spy ring in Brazil has been virtually completed, police declared today in reporting that 64 German agents were arrested during the hunt. All face trial and possible death sentences.

Police said that the spies received their instructions from Dietrich Niebuhr, German naval attache who was stationed in Rio De Janeiro, and who later was transferred to Buenos Aires when Brazil broke relations with the Axis powers.

Niebuhr today was en route to Germany following his expulsion from Argentina because of espionage activities.

In-Law's Out!

Count Galeazzo Ciano, son-in-law of Premier Mussolini, has been ousted along with 11 other ministers from the Italian cabinet in a purge widely interpreted as indicating a split over internal policy. The Duce took over Ciano's duties.

BATES BACK AS CHIEF MONDAY

Winds Up Affairs With FBI Tonight, Settles Rumors On Change of Plans.

Meade K. Bates will sever his connections tonight with the Federal Bureau of Investigation and on Monday will resume his duties as Mansfield's chief of police.

This information came this morning in a message to a member of the police department, and sets at rest rumors which were gaining spread within the department that the in-and-out chief had revamped his plans and would remain with the FBI.

After serving one year with the bureau under a leave granted by council, Bates returned to police duties here Jan. 11. On Jan. 16 he applied for a second year's leave of absence but on

Four Arrested as Speeders, One for Traveling at 70

Violations of the war-prescribed victory speed of 35 miles an hour drew police attention last night, Mansfield patrolmen nabbing two violators while state highway patrolmen arrested two.

Paul Grimes, 19, Ashland, will appear before Municipal Judge H. H. Schettler Monday morning to answer the charge of "barreling it" 70 miles an hour on U. S. Route 12 last night. Robert Keller, Cleveland, posted bond of $16.30 and waived hearing following his arrest for speeding 60 miles an hour on the same highway.

Soviets Speed Encirclement Of North Key

Red Spearheads Swing Around Kursk As Southern Armies Push Toward Sea of Azov to Shut Giant Trap Around Invaders.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(INS)—Russian forces converging on Kharkov, great Ukraine industrial center and main Axis base in south Russia, were within 45 miles of the city, Reuters reported today in a dispatch from Moscow. The Soviet force which had driven closest to Kharkov was said to have scored a 25-mile advance in the past 24 hours.

(By International News Service)

MOSCOW—Russian offensives on the 500-mile front in the south surged ahead today in new gains following capture of points close to the German 1942 line.

The mid-day Soviet communique reported capture of a series of strongpoints south of Rostov and in this sector one Russian unit broke into a town on a rail line and captured a train loaded with German tanks and other military supplies.

(A Stockholm dispatch to Reuters in London said the Russians have occupied Bataisk, only 10 miles south of Rostov, and the Germans were preparing to evacuate the city. If this report is correct the Caucasus gateway is within the range of Russian big guns.)

"On another sector our units captured two large towns. Two enemy companies were wiped out and we took numerous prisoners and much booty," the communique stated.

"In the area of Krasny Liman (miday between Kharkov and Rostov) a battalion of infantry was routed from an inhabited locality. Mobile units on this front, operating behind enemy lines annihilated the garrisons of three towns.

"East of Kursk several additional towns were captured by Soviet forces and 300 prisoners captured."

Soviet columns pushing towards the shore of the Sea of Azov in the direction of Yeisk were reported within 12 miles of the port.

Far to the north the encirclement of Kursk made steady progress. Russian forces several days ago breached the German 1942 line at a point only 22 miles north of Kursk, and today the southern claw of the Soviet pincers was said to be only 18 miles southeast of the city.

Other Russian spearheads were reported within 50 miles of Kharkov, and only 45 miles from Belgorod, a strongly fortified town between Kursk and Kharkov.

A Soviet special communique announced the fall of two more important points—Staiy Oskol, a railway town 75 miles southeast of Kursk, and Izyum, 75 miles southeast of Kharkov. It was from Izyum that the German drive on Rostov was launched last summer.

Another Russian force drove on 35 miles southwest of Stary Oskol to capture Skorodnoe, within striking distance of Belgorod. The Izyum garrison was surrounded and only a few escaped, reports of the battle declared.

The victorious Red armies pushed on beyond the captured strong points and occupied addi-

RUMORS: Report Churchill to Visit Lisbon, Troops on Border

(By International News Service)

LONDON—Portuguese troops and detachments of police have been rushed toward the Spanish border, and Minister of War Antonio De Oliveira Salazar has left Lisbon unexpectedly for an undisclosed destination, the Scandinavian Telegraph bureau declared today.

A Stockholm dispatch to Reuters news agency, quoting messages from Lisbon as authority for the reports, said.

"Something unusual is happening."

These developments came at a time when the German radio is filling the air with reports that Prime Minister Winston Churchill plans to visit Lisbon. The Daily Mail today quoted the Berlin radio as declaring that "two British admirals, a general and two civilians had arrived in Lisbon from Cairo."

The telegraph declared the Ankara radio reported that rumors persisted in Berlin that Mr. Churchill was about to visit a large neutral country in western Europe.

Reuter's declared that these speculations in Berlin were linked with another German report that Generalissimo Francisco Franco, Spanish dictator, would visit Lisbon tomorrow, accompanied by Gen. Francisco Gomez Jordana, his minister of foreign affairs, and several members of the general staff.

(Editor's Note: A Dakar radio broadcast, however, reported that Franco had left Madrid for Malaga in southern Spain to attend a

HALVED: Jap Squadron Attacks U. S. Ships, 17 Planes Destroyed

(By International News Service)

AN ADVANCED BASE IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC—Half of a Japanese torpedo plane squadron which made a two-day attack on an American naval force in the Solomons was shot into the sea, it was disclosed today.

The Japanese raid occurred off Rennell island, 100 miles south of Guadalcanal on Jan. 29 and 30. When the battles ended at least 17 of the 35 attacking planes had fallen victims to the accuracy of American gunners.

The enemy adopted new tactics in a night attack in which they dropped flares to light the targets. The Japanese formations dropped their torpedoes from safe ranges, but nevertheless the anti-aircraft gunners on the American vessels shot down six of the raiders.

On the following day the Japanese came back, this time in daylight. The entire formation of 11 attacking planes was destroyed.

There was no announcement of damage to the American warships.

The enemy planes were two-motored Mitsubishis. They first dropped smoke pots to mark the disposition of our ships and then released blinding flares which served the double purpose of blinding our gunners and making the area covered by our vessels almost as light as day.

One American warship alone accounted for three of the six Japa-

Mix-Ups Ahead Over Clock Shift

The familiar question "What time is it?" may not be so easy to answer if Ohio turns back its clocks. In fact, you'll probably find yourself retorting "What time is it, which time?"

The Sunday edition brings you pictures of what's likely to happen under the new time set-up in the average Mansfield home, and a story explains why you may need two clocks around the house just to get on with the ordinary business of living.

Has the war made more truants in the schools of Mansfield and Richland county? An interview with attendance officers answers the question tomorrow and bares some of the problems with which these officers must cope.

Who is the real "brain" of the Russian army? Stalin? No, he's a general you may never have heard of. Meet him in a pictorial feature in the Sunday edition.

Meet another key man in another of our allied nations in the article on President Camacho of Mexico and what he has done to end the era of revolutions in our neighboring country.

And don't miss the series of legends that have grown up around Abraham Lincoln's tomb. For example there's one that he really isn't buried there, and there's a true narrative about the man who tried to rob the tomb and hold the body for ransom!

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—When bouquets are passed out for quick conversion to war industry, there ought to be a special arrangement of red-white-and-blue orchids for the Walt Disney flicker factory.

Disney's pre-war output, for entertainment only, amounted roughly to 32,000 feet of film, or about two features and 20 short subjects a year. The figure was equalled or topped in the first month of 1943 — and the estimate for the year is between 250 and 300,000 feet, despite loss of large slices of his personnel to the service!

Coons

The productions include many technical training films for the U. S. Navy delivered at cost, several short films in color under the auspices of the Office of the Co-Ordinator of Inter American Affairs, and the feature "Victory Through Air Power" based on Maj. Alexander P. de Seversky's best seller. There is a second South American feature in work, plus the usual Disney shorts and two features, "The Gremlins" and "Peter Pan."

The Disney campus, of course, is not the same busy going place it used to be. You sign in and out when visiting there now, and you wear an identification badge just as when visiting an aircraft factory.

But there's an ever more noticeable difference. Disney now uses many live actors to assist his paint-pot characters. They're time-savers. In some films Walt is using them where they deliver the same results as cartoons would, reserving his artists for effects impossible to obtain otherwise. There are five actors—including Seversky himself — in "Victory," and also in "The Gremlins," but "Peter Pan" will be exclusively paint-pot.

I saw a few of Walt's educational shorts the other day and I never saw education made so painless. There's one called "The Winged Scourge" which deals with malaria and its carrier, the Anapholes mosquito. In color, the picture details how the mosquito does its dirty work, then enlists the aid of the Seven Dwarfs (their first screen work since "Snow White") to demonstrate protective measures. There's another, "Defense Against Invasion," which likens the body to a walled city, its people "mobilized" on a war basis through vaccination so that when enemy germs attack they are repulsed. Duces history and information in "The Grain That Built a Hemisphere," the story of corn, its development and present and prospective uses.

If pictures like these ever become part of the little red schoolhouse's attraction, the ancient art of playing hookey will disappear. What's more, the kiddies may have to fight for their seats — with their own papas and mamas when Prof. Walt Disney takes the platform.

STUDY REPEAL OF $25,000 SALARY LIMIT

House Committeemen Told Plan Costs Nation 110 Millions In Revenue Loss.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—As the house ways and means committee convened to consider repeal of President Roosevelt's $25,000 a year limitation on salaries, Rep. Gearhart (R.), Cal., sponsor of the repealer, today charged the limitation would cost the government $110,000,000 in lost revenue this year through reduced taxable incomes.

Gearhart said the figures had been prepared for him by Colin Stam, chief of staff of the joint committee on internal revenue taxation.

As the committee met, its 10 Republican members were reported to be lined up solidly behind the repeal bill, with at least three Democrats and possibly five prepared to join them. They proposed to support the Gearhart measure as a substitute for a bill by Chairman Doughton (D.), N. C., which would increase the national debt limit from $125,000,000,000 to $210,000,000,000.

The Gearhart measure is identical with that sponsored by Doughton except that it contains a rider which would repeal the salary limitation.

What the outcome within the committee would be was thrown into doubt by reports that Mr Roosevelt was personally intervening in the fight and had dispatched a letter to Doughton opposing repeal.

When the committee met a week ago for a routine discussion of the national debt limit and the Doughton bill, action was hurriedly postponed when congressional leaders suddenly discovered that there was a clear majority of at least 13 to 12 and possibly 15 to 16 for substituting the Gearhart bill.

President Roosevelt invoked the salary limitation by executive order last October after congress had refused an earlier request by him for legislative authority to take the step. Since that date many members have risen in the senate and house and challenged the chief executive's move, claiming that he had overridden congress and stepped beyond the bounds of his authority.

PRESSES CHARGE

Injured Man Appears In Court To Accuse Assailants.

With zigzag slashes on his forehead and face resembling a relief map of world battlefronts, Charles Glenn, 277 North Adams street, was in municipal court this morning, swathed in bandages, to press charges of assault and battery against Thelma King and George Wilson, Longview avenue. All are colored.

Patrolman John Steel, Don Mitchell and Glen Adams found Glenn in his home last night, suffering from loss of blood and in attention to his wounds. Glenn told the patrolmen, who took him to General hospital for treatment, that the King woman beat him with a glass while Wilson belayed him with a bottle during a drinking bout on North Franklin avenue.

Judge H. H. Schettler continued the trial to Monday morning.

Welcome To—

COALITION OF LABOR DEVELOPS

Murray Announces 'Union Front' Against FDR Foes In Congress.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—A coalition of four of the nation's biggest labor organizations representing 13,000,000 workers was being developed today to resist what it called the conspiracy by "an unholy alliance" of "poll tax Democrats" and "reactionary" Republicans to sabotage President Roosevelt.

Formation of the labor body was announced by CIO President Philip Murray who said that the united legislative front "is still in the preliminary stage" but is acceptable to all four organizations — the CIO, AFL, Railroad Brotherhoods and the Farmers Union.

Murray said that the coalition is entirely non-political in nature and the "general plan" remains to be worked out but it will give close consideration to each particular program of the four labor groups.

The CIO's executive board sounded the keynote of the coalition's platform when it adopted a report denouncing "an unholy alliance of poll tax Democrats with the most reactionary wings of the Republican party." The congressional group, the board said, has given notice that it intends to "sabotage, rather than support," President Roosevelt.

The board voted that the organizations join "to resist this conspiracy," and called on all legislative committees of the CIO chapters to band together and urge upon congress the "views of American workers."

EQUALS RICK'S WAR RECORD

Marine Shoots Down 26th Jap Plane; Wins Praise.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, who downed 26 enemy aircraft in World War I, hopes that Marine Capt. Joseph J. Foss of Sioux Falls, S. D., doubles his old mark.

Learning that Foss recently had shot down his 26th Japanese plane in the South Pacific, Rickenbacker yesterday sent the following message of congratulations:

"Just heard that you have brought down your 26th enemy airplane which equals my record of victories in World War I, and I hasten to offer my heartfelt congratulations with the hope that you will double it. But in trying, use the same cool calculating technique that has brought you the results to date for we will need your kind back here after the war is over."

ARMY CLAMPS DOWN ON RELEASE OF MEN OVER 38 YEARS OF AGE

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — A tightening up of the army's policy on the release of men over 38 years of age today prevents the discharge of soldiers who attain that age after Feb. 28.

Issuing a list of instructions regarding the discharge of men over 38, the war department also said that men of this age who enlist or who are inducted after the end of this month cannot be released.

The department said that due to the limited supply of manpower available for military service "it is impracticable to continue indefinitely the discharge of men as they attain their 38th birthday solely because of having reached that age."

"Discharge," the department said, "will be for the convenience of the government at the soldier's request to accept employment in essential industry or agriculture, subject to the following requirements:

"A. Has attained his 38th birthday on or before Feb. 28, 1943.

"B. Enlisted or was inducted into the army on or before Feb. 28, 1943.

"C. Has, prior to May 1, 1943, voluntarily submitted to his immediate commanding officer written request for discharge. In this connection, commanders are authorized to extend the time for submission of application in individual cases when the soldier did not have reasonable opportunity to file his application.

"D. Has presented evidence in the form of a letter or statement from a prospective employer, the United States employment service, farm agent, or other responsible person to the effect that the individual concerned will be employed in essential industry, including agriculture, if he is discharged from the army.

"E. Release of the soldier will not seriously affect the efficiency of the organization to which assigned."

DIES IN SHELBY

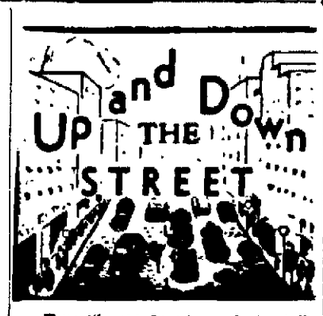
J. M. Pfahler, 80, Succumbs at Memorial Hospital.

SHELBY—John M. Pfahler, 80, resident of the Shelby community for many years, died Friday night in Shelby Memorial hospital.

Mr. Pfahler was born in Crawford county Dec. 6, 1862, and lived in Shelby 21 years before moving to West Liberty, his home during the last years of his life.

Funeral services will be conducted Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. at the Barkdull funeral home with Rev. D. Bruce Young, pastor of the First Lutheran church, officiating. Burial will be in Oakland cemetery.

Surviving are one son, Roy of Shelby; four brothers, Silas of Tiro, Frank, Ira, and William, all of West Liberty, and two grandsons, Lloyd of Mansfield, and Paul, stationed with the Marines at San Diego, Calif.



Two "home front combatants"—one suffering from hurt feelings and the other the loss of a tooth, were "shooed" home from a Park avenue west restaurant last night by Patrolmen Richard Hecht and John Grohol, according to a police report. Lacking the arms and ammunition of the busier fighting forces, Patrolman Hecht reported, the melee was a "battle of words, both talking out of turn." The smoke of verval assault had nearly vanished when the police reinforcements arrived, the combatants retreating to the safety and comfort of their beds at home.

The recent changes in personnel in the Salzedo ensemble, the four outstanding artists who opened the 1942-43 Civic Music concert season in Mansfield, was learned with considerable interest by the association membership. Both the French flutist, Rene LeRoy, and Hungarian cellist, Janos Scholz, have taken leave of the ensemble to form their own musical unit with Sidney Foster, young American pianist. The Salzedos have retrenched their forces by adding Ruth Freeman and Ann Dritell to their organization.

SHELBY CYCLE HEARING OFF

Hearing of charges by the OPA that the Shelby Cycle company had been violating OPA restrictions on the sale of bicycles had been continued indefinitely today in Judge Emerich B. Freed's court at Cleveland, press dispatches said.

The Shelby firm was accused of selling bicycle repair kits containing enough parts to make complete bicycles, thus avoiding government restrictions.

The OPA is investigating the claim made by the cycle company that certain essential parts, without which bicycles could not be built, were absent from their kits and could not be obtained, OPA Attorney Howard R. Hirsch said.

SEN. THOMAS CITES NEEDS OF MILITARY

Congress Shows Opposition To Drafting of Fathers For 11 Million Army.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Sen. Elmer Thomas (D.), Okla., declared today that the American public must get ready to tighten its belt and live on food rations far under normal peace-time standards.

Thomas said that this is plainly evident from testimony taken by a house appropriations subcommittee which has heard high officials testify on the proposal to bring over 11,000,000 persons into the armed services by the end of the year.

The Oklahoman's statement came as members of the house, opposed to the drafting of married men with children and concerned over the growing manpower shortage on farms, planned to press action next week on legislation that would drastically revise draft machinery.

Rep. Kilday (D.), Tex., offered a bill setting up four new classes under the draft act—single men, single men with dependents, married men without children and married men with children. Rep. Fulmer (D.), N. C., chairman of the house agriculture committee, introduced a measure that would exempt farm workers, bring about the release of farm workers drafted last year and force the army to furnish farm hands in case of emergency.

Chairman May (D.), Ky., of the house military affairs committee, ordered hearings next week on Kilday's bill and predicted its passage.

Entitling his bill "the emergency farm labor act of 1943," Fulmer said that "unless the farm labor shortage is taken care of promptly our army of 1943-44 will have to fight on an empty stomach."

Members of the senate military affairs committee, who heard War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt testify in secret session, said that McNutt clings to his idea that the 11,000,000 armed forces figure is too large.

High ranking army officers, however, insist that the total is necessary and that the country can both feed them and provide them with the best equipment in the world.

Former President Herbert Hoover, food administrator during World war No. 1, appears before the appropriations body Monday.

Seek to Settle Strike of 1200 Pupils at Lima

LIMA —(INS)— A committee of seven senior boys at Lima South high school today were to air grievances which caused a "strike" of the school's 1,200 pupils yesterday, with Supt. J. McLean Reed.

The pupils paraded through the downtown streets, halting traffic for several minutes, in a demonstration in behalf of Harold Jennings, a member of the school's football and basketball squad. Jennings was expelled by Principal Paul Garrison for disciplinary reasons.

Coach Bryce Bloom also dismissed Jennings from the basketball squad "for indifference" but said the Jennings' dismissal from the squad had nothing to do with differences with Garrison.

Superintendent Reed pleaded with the strikers from the top of an automobile before meeting with 145 senior boys who appointed the committee of seven.

Garrison was out of town attending his mother's funeral.

saw in the move an effort by Mussolini to rehabilitate his personal prestige which has reached a new low with the Italian people. Also he hopes to shock the nation out of its apathy and bewilderment and depressed spirits.

Il Duce now can once more represent himself as a man of action, it was pointed out, and one who does not hesitate to take a firm grasp on the reins at a time of crisis.

The Rome radio announcement of the mass reshuffle said that Mussolini now assumes "the entire burden for the conduct of political and military operations in this delicate phase of the conflict."

This was expected to be welcomed in Berlin, where Ciano was anything but popular. He was regarded as too pushing in his territorial demands for Italy as her share of the spoils, and he was considered only lukewarm in his support of the Italo-German alliance.

The wholesale firings of his political aides was reported to have followed a violent dispute during a cabinet meeting Friday afternoon at which Caino and Grandi threatened to resign over disagreements on matters concerning finances, food allotments and price fixing.

The fact that one of those dismissed was Count Paolo Thaon Di Revel, minister of finance, was taken as evidence of Mussolini's alarm over the possibility of inflation which has deeply disturbed the country.

Some of the other dismissed members were suspected of having toyed with the idea of detaching Italy from the Axis.

Nazi flier, who later was recaptured in San Antonio, Tex.

Defense counsel told the court that Stephan's association with Krug was limited to six hours in Detroit last April. Stephan gave Krug no money, but provided him with food and drink and bought him a bus ticket to Chicago, the defense asserted.

The death sentence was appealed on grounds that the indictment did not set up grounds for a treason charge, that the indictment was not founded on facts, and that if Stephan were guilty of a crime, it was not treason.

But in a 21-page decision affirming conviction, presiding Judge Ben Hicks said that "after careful and painstaking review, we are unable to find any reversible errors."

One of the points on which the Stephan defense also sought in vain to set aside his conviction and death sentence was the fact that the trial judge permitted Krug to testify "after he had given the Nazi salute while he was attired in the full uniform of an officer of the German army."

The defense asserted that Krug was "so infamous" that the court on its own motion should have barred him from testifying. The appeal also charged that the sentence "was of such severity, not in line with the testimony and the evidence, as to constitute a cruel and inhuman sentence."

The American citizenship of Stephan's wife was revoked after his trial on grounds that she concealed Canadian residence and arrests for liquor violations in her application.

Mother Knows

That when she was a youngster she took Father John's Medicine so now she gives it to her little girl Father John's Medicine is used for relief of colds when there is lack of vitamin A and soothes throat irritation due to colds.

Its successful use during the past 85 years is a most convincing proof of value.

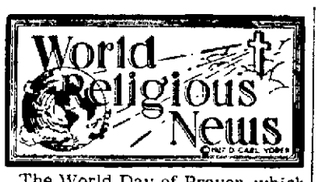
A pastor writing in the Christian Advocate says, "I should go to church because I need to be humbled. I need to recognize God by worshiping Him. Without the respect for God, life would be more precarious, and human freedom and liberty jeopardized.

"Church going would make me a better person. One of Man's greatest duties is to struggle to improve himself. As Dr. Henry C. Link has said, as a result of his studies and tests 'Individuals who believed in religion or attended a church had significantly better personalities than those who did not?'"

Why not accept the invitation to COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

—D. Carl Yoder.



The World Day of Prayer, which since 1927 has been observed on the first Friday of Lent, will fall this year on March 12. This day is a prayer observance among Christian women of all denominations throughout the world similar to the observance of the Churches of Worldwide Communion Sunday in October. "Father, I Pray That They May All Be One" is the theme of the 1943 prayer program.

During the coming year the Sacred Congregation of Rites will assemble in the Vatican to consider the canonization of Blessed Frances Cabrini who died in Chicago in 1917. Mother Cabrini was the founder of the Missionary Sisters of the Sacred Heart, a religious order which ministers to Italian immigrants in this country. She was beatified in 1938.

Contributions which Christianity is making toward a safe and better world will be discussed in the 1943 series of weekly broadcasts by Dr. Leslie Bates Moss, Executive Director of the Committee on Foreign Relief Appeals in the churches. During February, March and April this series "This World of Ours" will be heard each Friday at 1:30 p. m., E. W. T., from coast to coast over the Blue Network and its associated stations. Among typical topics scheduled are "Humanity Hungers," "Stout Hearts," "Africa—Open Gateway" and "From Broadway to Bombay."

"We are fighting," says President Roosevelt in a message regarding Brotherhood Week, February 19-28, "that the spirit of brotherhood which we prize in this country may be practiced here and by free men everywhere. It is our promise to extend such brotherhood earthwide that gives hope to all the world. . . . I commend to all our citizens the observance of Brotherhood Week." This February marks the fourth annual observance by the Federal Council of Churches of Brotherhood Month, of which Brotherhood Week is a feature; and on February 14 the Federal council marks its 21 annual observance of Race Relations Sunday.

A hearth without a fire is dismal indeed. But set the wood and coal ablaze; the picture has changed. Warm and cheer pervade the atmosphere, and a new light sits on the countenance of the family circle. In every man, woman, and child there is some good, some latent virtues, which, if kindled by kindly words of cheer and encouragement, would completely transform their lives.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1943.

Drive carefully tomorrow—if you decide that it is really necessary to drive.

It is being noted that none of Hitler's spokesmen, on the recent anniversary occasion, intimated that "the first ten years are the hardest."

At the time of year when there's some daylight that might be "saved" the legislature votes to set the clocks back. Serving in the legislature seems to do strange things to people.

Stalingrad's Glorious Chapter

WHATEVER else may come out of this great war to take a lasting place in world history, the final triumph of those gallant Russian fighters at Stalingrad will shine through the centuries.

Not so many months ago the fate of Stalingrad seemed sealed and boastful Hitler announced its fall, as Nazi legions swarmed into the city to carry on their work of devastation.

Slowly but surely the tables were turned and the unpredictable Josef Stalin unleashed unsuspected reserve strength against the ruthless invaders.

Hitler overestimated the power of the German war machine, in his attempted conquest of Russia, and the world underestimated Russia's remarkable defensive ability, and eventually to take and hold the offensive against massive and well-equipped armies of the enemy.

The Stalingrad triumph is only one of a series of successes that have marked Russian advances through the winter, and while the full extent of German losses cannot be more than roughly estimated, it is evident that this winter's campaign has put a severe strain on the Nazi war machine in loss of men and equipment.

Speculation as to the potential strength of Russia to continue the war to the point of driving Hitler's hordes entirely out of the country, and then carry the fighting into Germany, is without point at this time, as the Russians are not inclined to broadcast their plans for the future.

It does appear, however, that whatever Great Britain and the United States can do to help Russia carry on to the finish of Hitlerism in Europe will be well repaid by successful continuance of that phase of the war.

Less Meat May Benefit Health

AS THE meat shortage reaches a point of restraining the carnivorous dietary preferences of some people, with consequent trend toward herbivorous balance in foods, health benefits may at least partially offset the annoyance caused by change of eating habits.

Except for outright vegetarians, inclination of a considerable percentage of Americans has been to over-emphasize the importance of meat as a food, with the result that many excessive meat eaters developed obesity to an extent deleterious to health.

Being an omnivorous animal, it is left to man to do his own deciding in the matter of balancing food intake between meat and vegetable items, and it will probably be quite generally agreed that this is not always done in a way that is most likely to "keep the doctor away."

Men in the armed forces, as well as persons working hard at manual tasks, need more meat than other people, and it is to provide these with the meat that they really need to sustain health and strength, that restrictions are being imposed on other meat-eaters.

The quantity of meat that will still be available to families, if balanced with other foodstuffs, will provide a better diet than is now being enjoyed anywhere else in the world, and there is little danger of privation or depletion in physical energy if people choose their food sensibly and voluntarily conform to restrictions made necessary by war.

Undersecretary Has an Idea

GOVERNMENT seizure of seven million privately owned automobiles in the United States, as recommended by Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, is surely something that will receive more than such "recommendation" before it is acted upon.

Mr. Patterson, it appears, also recommended seizure of all spare tires, which many would regard as tantamount to seizure of all cars, as few motorists would care to take chances involved in driving without a spare, thus risking irreparable damage to all four tires.

It is Mr. Patterson's idea, as explained to a congressional committee studying the rubber situation, that the seven million seized cars should be junked for scrap metal, these to include an estimated three million cars in families owning more than one car.

If sacrifice of seven million privately owned automobiles is ever shown to be an actual war need it will probably be accepted philosophically by those who are directly affected, but it will require more than the views of an undersecretary of war to make such a proposal convincing.

Louvain's Architect Vindicated

THE DEATH of Whitney Warren at 78 removes a great American architect. He designed the Grand Central Terminal in New York, as well as several of the city's largest hotels. He is best remembered, however, for his reconstruction of the Louvain library in Belgium, destroyed by the Germans in the last war.

His work on this was attacked not for artistic reasons, but because of the Latin inscription which, translated, read, "Destroyed by German Fury; Restored by American Generosity." Though this seems a fair statement of the facts, it was attacked, in Mr. Warren's words, by "pacifists and politicians" who called the inscription "a legend of hate." Though the wording had been suggested by the late Cardinal Mercier, the Belgian leader during the German occupation, it was opposed by other Belgians, and despite a legal battle by Mr. Warren, was at last omitted.

Now the Louvain Library has been destroyed a second time. If, as cannot be doubted, American generosity makes good the loss, it is to be hoped that another Warren will arise to create an equally beautiful building. In any case, now that a second demolition has rubbed in the lesson, there will probably be no more opposition to an inscription fixing German responsibility.

Expect Russian Aid Against Japan

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Russia is the real explanation of the decision of Roosevelt and Churchill to make Hitler the Number 1 objective, despite the conviction of so many that it is dangerous and will lead to a long drawn out, costly and bloody war to permit Japan to entrench herself in the conquered islands and provinces.

Both Churchill and Roosevelt are convinced that they will have Stalin's help against Japan once the threat of Hitler is removed from the Soviet leader's heart. But NOT before.

It is not a question of merely relying on any word that Stalin may or may not have given. It is purely a question of logic. Russia can be depended upon to put no obstacle in the path of crushing Japan, after the war in Europe is finished, SOLELY and EXCLUSIVELY if Stalin should then figure that it would be to Russia's interest to see Japan beaten.

The British and American leaders have no doubt how Stalin will figure, when that time comes. But they know they are spread mighty thin already, and that the whipping of Japan would be a tremendously easier problem if Russia were co-operating.

MOST people view this phase of the situation in terms of use of East Siberian air bases for bombing raids on Japan. That of course is important, but it is nothing like as important as would be Russian supplying of Chinese armies!

Obviously, at present Russia is not able to supply her own armies as well as she would like, so she can spare little for the Chinese. But if the war in Europe were to end, Russia's tremendous capacity for armament production would be deprived of a market, so to speak. Even if she continued neutral so far as Japan was concerned she has no "neutrality law" or anything else to embarrass her in selling arms and munitions to the Chinese.

Naturally, Russia could be expected to get all she could out of that situation. For example, she might demand a free hand about Finland, Latvia and the other Baltic republics in exchange for active aid against the Japs. She might demand a free hand in the Balkans and in Poland.

All of these might be very embarrassing, especially to our idealists. But it might appeal very strongly to mothers with sons in our army and navy, whose lives might be saved if Russia were energetically arming the Chinese to fight their hereditary enemy.

MEANTIME, however, the Russians have made their position clear to London and Washington. Despite their successes since the beginning of this winter, they are still afraid of Germany. They believe the Nazis still have the energy, manpower and supplies for another crushing offensive when spring comes. They are convinced that this offensive will be in the Caucasus.

They figure this last because they have studied the military situation from every angle, and they believe that the other possibilities, such as the invasion of Spain and seizure of Gibraltar, or the invasion of Britain, would be too costly.

The Russians believe even more firmly than our experts or the British that Germany is saving her air power now for some new blow, and they are sure the blow will be aimed at them. So they would be loath to undertake any new venture, such as risking war with Japan, while the Nazi dagger, as they see it, is still aimed at Russia's throat.

Our Kid Crime Wave

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

JIMMY crammed the last of the raisin pudding down his 14-year-old throat, rolled his napkin into a sticky wad, grabbed a violently colored convertible from the hall rack and departed—five steps at a time down the front stairs.

"Bye, Mom . . . 'bye, Dad . . . see you when!" came his echoing hail.

Mom beamed. "What a darling," she chirped to dad. "I simply can't see why people make a problem out of these modern children. All these horror stories you read in the papers—I believe they're made out of whole cloth, most of 'em. Show a child you trust him—and you'll have no trouble. There's our Jimmy, off to the library every night at 8, keeping up with his studies, innocent as a lamb. And it's all because we've brought him up to be honest and wholesome."

Dad grabbed wistfully at his last spoonful of coffee. His confidence in the young generation evidently had its limits, but he had learned to keep them to himself. Which may have accounted for his comparative calm when the police station summoned him at 1:35 a. m. to witness Jimmy and a dozen other drunken, dishevelled juveniles in a gin raid down by the warehouses.

What dad said is not of unique interest. The whole nation, headed by J. Edgar Hoover and backed by ruthless statistics, is saying it and it doesn't make pretty reading, warns Francis Sill Wickware in his walloping article on our "Teen Age Crime Wave" in the February issue of Cosmopolitan.

"Don't read it if you're squeamish," says he—but the nation's shame will be on your delinquent head if you don't for, in this last year, youthful American crime has increased from 20, 30 and 40 per cent to 100 per cent in the great shipping centers.

And he's not referring to village rut-ups or tom-boy tricks. These young yeggs, both male and female, range in age from 12 to 20 with the majority under 15, and their crimes include every form of vicious law breaking, including stick-ups, violent beatings, car stealing, forgery, rape and murder.

In Los Angeles the police arrested a gang of 29 boys and girls accused of murder, assault, robbery and other violent crimes. It is not pleasant to learn that new members were required to commit a holdup or, in the case of girls, to be seduced.

Nor is the female of the species in the minority by any means, says Francis Sill Wickware.

"Even less pleasant is the recommendation by the New York City children's court that parks in the city should be closed at night. The reason is prostitution, not of adult professionals, but of soldier-mad and sailor-mad girls from 12 to 16. This is not a New York phenomenon. It is national.

There are other statistics too numerous and appalling to repeat here. The horrifying increase in venereal disease, the collapse in standards of decency—a collapse unprecedented in the history of our country.

And, of course, the war and the working mothers seem largely responsible for the whole bad smelling mess. But I doubt it. I believe this witch's brew has been cooking long before war came. It's tragic when a competent mother of a growing family must give her day to a shipyard, leaving her youngsters to run the streets.

But I have long since observed that a lazy, silly mother can work fully as much havoc as the worker. While Mrs. A takes her honest stand on the assembly line, Mrs. B turns her home into a juke joint where any conduct is permitted and every principle is ridiculed. If we're going to have a house cleaning, let's make it 100 per cent!

Dave Boone Says:

NOTHING will come of that Ruml plan, if you ask me. It's too simple, too direct and too helpful. Legislators don't like anything that's too helpful to the treasury and they're awful suspicious of anything that's helpful to the taxpayers.

If the Ruml plan were adopted both the people and the tax officials could go ahead without any headaches from now on. But the headaches have come to be regarded as compulsory.

Washington is afraid of a situation where everybody could function easily, smoothly and without any dizzy spells. A thing like that would be too old-fashioned. It might even get us back to American traditions and simple arithmetic.

Under the Ruml plan the thing would be as simple as daylight saving. It's a good thing the treasury chiefs didn't pass on daylight saving. It would never have got by 'em.

Instead of just pushing the clocks back an hour for 1943 they would have invented a new screwy type of clock, made the hands invisible and insisted that all the lost daylight be multiplied by half-past eight, added to ten o'clock and the whole thing made retroactive.

Our Awful Wastefulness.

Every language has the equivalent of our English—waste not, want not. Probably we Americans are the most wasteful people on earth. We fill our plates and eat only half of the food on them. Look at the ordinary man eating pancakes. He will deluge them with syrup and when he has eaten his cakes he leave a little lake of syrup in the plate. Children are given bowls of porridge and they do not begin to eat it all. In nearly all serving of food we are wickedly lavish.

There is not a big hotel in the country but that has as much food wasted as is eaten. This is not the fault of the hotel, not at all, it is the fault of the guests who do not clean their plates. We are so foolish about food—witness bread one-day old which is held in such small esteem that to sell it the price is cut in two. Yet stale bread from a health standpoint is to be preferred.

Perhaps the war will teach us the sin of waste. When we carelessly take more than we can eat, we might think of the starving millions of Europe, not to congratulate ourselves on how much better off we are than they, but to have a proper realization of the value of food.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Summary of Week's Happenings

Manpower, Taxation Problems Hold Chief Interest In Congress

—By ASSOCIATED PRESS

ARMISTICE DAY, 1918, found America with 4½ million men under arms, several million more available for combat duty had they been needed.

This month, as the country headed well into its second year of war—plus a year of peacetime training—the World war I army figure had been surpassed and Washington prepared to produce a force more than twice the size of that 25 years ago.

Tempo for the activity was set by President Roosevelt as he returned from his momentous trip to Africa, declared the conference was designed to fulfill his message to congress: "I cannot tell you when or where the United Nations are going to strike next in Europe. But we are going to strike—and strike hard."

To congressional leaders, he gave no optimistic picture. The war likely will have no quick conclusion, it will be fierce and costly in lives. To meet the needs of the offensives, he suggested a maximum of 7,500,000 men for the army alone.

The War Manpower Commission acted quickly. Chairman Paul V. McNutt came up with the first general order aimed at lifting men from non-war into war activities. He listed 29 activities—curtain makers, bartenders, bell boys, among them—and ordered these workers to get into essential industry, or expect no draft deferment after April 1 regardless of the number of their dependents.

Next, McNutt, asserted that by the end of this year, "10 out of every 14" able-bodied men between 18 and 38 would be in the armed services. What percentage of this group, estimated at 22,000,000, already has been inducted, McNutt would not say.

The developments raised the possibilities of new action in congress—still inclined toward caution in manpower matters.

Said Kentucky's Rep. May of the House military affairs committee: "I'm on the fence on the question of legislation limiting the size of the armed services. But with manpower reserves running low in this country, with Russia and China holding vast reserves of manpower, and with this country the arsenal of democracy supplying the maximum of war materials for the United Nations, it might not be a bad idea to limit the size."

At Home

Income Tax Ideas.

For more than two months the treasury kept mum, let the experts and the inexperts, hat out a few ideas for revising income tax collections to make it less painful for the 44,000,000 Americans facing the heaviest payments in history.

If the Treasury consented to make any statement at all, the essence of it was: No plan will be acceptable that does not insure the government of every dollar due. In other words, there could be no "skipping" of a year, no "forgiving" of accounts collectible.

During the week, the Treasury unveiled its own plan, disclosed it to be no harsher than most pay-as-you-earn proposals, even indicated a willingness to compromise where the burden becomes too heavy.

In effect, the treasury would have employers deduct 19 per cent weekly from all incomes not exceeding $2,000 after credits and exemptions. For single persons the deduction would be on all income over $11 weekly; married, $26 plus $8 for each dependent. Thus, a $40 a week married man with one dependent would pay $1.14, in addition to the present 5 per cent Victory tax.

Where congress had talked of rushing through a pay-as-you-earn plan by March 15, the Treasury spoke of July 15 "at the latest."

But to write off all 1942 taxes—the Treasury still said no. Stressing the fact that returns and initial installments must be made this March 15 as usual, the Treasury said some of the current tax might be deferred, some forgiven if unusual hardships seemed in prospect.

Putout. By Flynn.

Over the week-end administration leaders had been busy. They sought out fence-sitting colleagues on the matter of confirming Edward J. Flynn as minister to Australia. They cajoled, they argued, they appealed in the interests of party harmony and support of the president.

Still the outlook was not good. Thirty-two Republicans and six Democrats were publicly committed against confirmation; 31 for it. In addition, a half-dozen Democrats said privately they would vote "no." Cloakroom polls by private observers indicated the nomination would lose by several votes.

A few hours before the senate convened, Edward J. Flynn ended all speculation, perhaps prevented embarrassment to the president and extra jubilation for Republicans by announcing he was asking that the nomination be withdrawn.

Ration Fashions.

Rationing may be inconvenient. But OPA at least is trying to make the ration books interesting. That was the conclusion of some housewives during the week as they learned that the third number of the wartime library is on the way perhaps to make its appearance shortly after March 1, when the rationing of canned and frozen fruits and vegetables and dried fruits begins.

No. 3 will depart from the prosaic numbers-and-letters with which to figure points, and will feature tanks, airplanes, aircraft carriers on its stamp.

But before presenting No. 3, OPA gave the signal for the start of No. 2, announced the suspension of all sales of these rationed products between midnight, Feb. 20, and March 1. Registration for the new ration books starts Feb. 22, continues 6 days.

Thoughtless Driver.

Editor News-Journal:

This morning as I was standing at my kitchen window doing dishes, I saw a truck—either dairy or grocery—stop up at the bridge and something was thrown out. I first thought it was garbage, but when I walked up I saw it was a shattered milk bottle, with sharp edges sticking up everywhere inside and under the guard rail where children walk on their way to our little school which stands at the top of the hill.

Just think what might happen if a child would slip and fall on the broken glass while passing that spot!

I believe we'll leave it up to that man's honor to come back and pick up the broken glass. If he doesn't I will.

Abroad

Master Race Mastered.

Through Stalingrad's rubble-strewn and shell-marked streets staggered the Germans, their uniforms stained and tattered, their faces gaunt, frozen, unshaven.

"Where," they mumbled to stolid Russian civilians, "is the place you surrender?"

By the hundreds and thousands they piled into the city that had staged the most fiercely courageous defense of the war, and which, Adolf Hitler had assured the Germans last fall, "will be taken."

They were the last of 300,000 crack German troops finally surrounded by a magnificent Russian strategical move, and then slowly whittled down to defeat when their commanders refused to surrender them an masse two weeks ago. Into the final bag of captives went a field marshal, 23 generals, hundreds of other officers, mounds of equipment.

Allied observers who thrilled to the final phase of the Stalingrad epic believed the Russians may have struck one of the decisive blows of the entire war.

When, As and If—

Multiplication of Germany's troubles fanned the stories of a secret revolutionary group building within the Reich, ready to seize power from the Nazis when the military situation becomes hopeless.

From Stockholm came the latest and it emphasized the recent shake-up of ranking army officers, the steady increase in strength of the elite guard—perhaps Hitler's insurance against such a move.

Among the reported points of the junta's program were these. Removal of all restrictions against Jews; a plebiscite for Austria; a proclamation that Germany considers a strong Poland necessary; return to Germany's old frontiers and a proclamation that Germany has no territorial claims beyond the borders of the old Reich; adherence to the Atlantic Charter principles.

Up Doenitz, Down Raeder.

For a half-dozen years, Erich Raeder was a key man in Adolf Hitler's coterie of power politicians. As head of the German admiralty, he tied to the Nazi star 10 years ago, moved into prominence as a Hitler adviser in 1935.

But like many another Hitler satellite of the days when German victory seemed just around the corner, Raeder came to the end of the line during the week. He was relieved of his title, succeeded by a man with whom he is said to have been feuding for a year—Admiral Karl Doenitz, commander of the submarine fleet.

In the Doenitz appointment observers foresaw a rise in the ferocity of submarine warfare, recalled his reported orders to his submarine crews: "Kill, kill, kill! That is your duty to the fatherland and the fuehrer. Have no humanity in your labors. Humanity means weakness."

Round Three.

"In my judgment, it may be a fallacious one, but my opinion is that the Japanese have abandoned any idea of reinforcement of their troops there and within the next 60 days all organized resistance on Guadalcanal will disappear."

It was Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox speaking, back in Hawaii from a trip to the far Pacific where he inspected U. S. island installations, twice was under Japanese air attack and escaped uninjured.

The secretary's interview had not been in print much more than 48 hours before there came ominous outpourings from radio Tokyo. In an air attack on U. S. surface vessels 100 miles south of Guadalcanal, said the reports, two battleships and three cruisers had been sunk.

For another 24 hours Washington remained silent, then announced a new sea-air struggle underway in the Solomons. At midweek, the battle was described by Knox as in the development stage. Of Japan's claims, Washington said only: The reports are grossly exaggerated."

For Eisenhower: 4 Stars?

To the U. S. Army's exclusive circle of full generals—there are two, MacArthur and Marshall—a third was reported about to be added as combined American, British and French forces stalked Nazi Marshal Erwin Rommel's troops along the narrow Tunisian corridor flanking the Mediterranean.

British sources said the creation of an Allied command was near, to be headed by Lt. Gen. Dwight Eisenhower who would be raised to a full general. Under him would be three Britons: Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, the man behind the British 8th Army's rout of the Rommel forces; Admiral Sir Andrew Brown Cunningham, head of Allied naval operations, and Chief Air Marshal Sir William Tedder, to command allied air operations.

Quotes

Roane Waring, national commander of the American Legion: "We of the Legion are more interested now in pints of nitroglycerine that go into bombs than in quarts of milk for the rest of the world."

Gen. George C. Marshall: "I am disturbed by the rapidity of the change from a speculative pessimism to undue optimism regarding the course of the war. Nothing could be more dangerous to the success of our country."

THE BOY FROM MAINE

CHAPTER XXII

It was a love affair on Hobey's part — they both knew that, though it was unexpressed—and on Rosalie's part it was a genuine liking, or it seemed to be. They got on beautifully. They here companionable; they enjoyed the same things and they proved to like the same kind of people. Rosalie's friends took to Hobey without question, and he to them. He made a fourth on parties when Rosalie needed him; she would call him any time—well in advance, or at the last minute—and say, "Hobey, are you free this evening, darling? Till you have to go to work, I mean? Well, then, help me out. Bailey's just phoned from the office, and he can't get home again, and we're having the Gardiners to dinner and I've got four tickets to "The Road to Rome. So could you fill in? Oh, you're an angel!"

The occasions when he saw her alone were rare, but they were unforgettable. She could lend a kind of magic to the most ordinary places—familiar restaurants, the Park, the interior of taxis—even the streets. You sat with her in restaurants, and everything took on a kind of golden haze, and everything went well; the orchestra played not too loudly, and they chose the tunes you liked.

It was at such times that they grew confidential and told each other many things they never spoke about at any other time. Hobey kept thinking that some day soon, some relaxed evening, during an hour like this, he would hear more than he yet knew, or yet understood, about her marriage and about Bailey. Meanwhile there were many things that were mystifying, and try as you would, you couldn't make up your mind as to exactly what the relationship was, or how it was working out, or whether or not Rosalie was happy—you could tell only that the marriage was one of those modern, we-are-free arrangements. Hobey had no real basis for his growing suspicion that it was free for Bailey than it was for Rosalie—or that she wanted it to be. This was just a hunch he had, and kept on having.

Occasionally, when he went to the apartment, Bailey was there, and usually other people were there too, and everybody was friendly and matter-of-fact about Hobey's presence. Bailey even seemed to like him, and to like having him around. If this was a bluff, it was a perfect one. Once Hobey thought he'd try to call it—just in case, and just to see—and he cornered Bailey, and faced him smilingly, and said, "Look Let me get this straight. Do you mind my sticking around so much? I wish you'd say so, if you do."

But Bailey merely looked amused. "Of course I'd say so, if I did. Don't worry, fellow. Matter of fact, you're a great addition to our little circle. We all think that."

He even gave Hobey's shoulder a fraternal thump. "Come on and have a drink," he said. "You're talking nonsense, here."

In the spring Rosalie sailed for Europe, and she would be gone two months or more. Hobey couldn't see her off on the ship, but he dropped in at the apartment for a minute around five o'clock. There were a dozen other people there, and the place was full of trunks and tissue paper and confusion and high spirits. Rosalie, beautiful and breathless, was pretending to be busy, although actually her servants were doing all the work. Bailey was opening champagne for all the guests. "Bailey's celebrating," Rosalie said. "Aren't you, darling?" It was the sort of light remark one made, but Hobey, sensitive to everything she said, had a sudden intuition that it wasn't really light, and that there was more to this than met the eye—that they had quarreled.

He hadn't had time to realize how much he was going to miss her, or how empty New York was going to seem when she was gone. The weeks dragged on, and there was no purpose to existence, and nobody—of all the hundreds of people he saw — amused him much.

The rest was complete vacuity; and it was almost a relief of tedium to be suddenly stricken—as he was one night in early May—with what was diagnosed as acute appendicitis. "Anything to while away the time," he said cheerfully to Ruby, from his bed of pain. This was the couch in his dressing room at the Club Mallory. He was taken from there to the hospital in an ambulance at 2 a. m., and operated on at 4. There proved to be no complications—just an open-and-shut case, as he said—and he had ten days' fuming rest in the hospital and then was out again.

He thought he felt perfectly well, and he went back to work that same evening, but it soon developed that the doctors' admonitions about not overdoing had been wiser than he'd deemed them, and at the end of 24 hours of much activity and little rest he felt far worse than he had at any time during his illness. With suitable self-indignation he complained to Ruby that he didn't know what to do about getting tired so easily, and that furthermore his nerves were shot to hell—he flew off the handle at the least thing. Never having been ill before, he found this genuinely puzzling, and he glared helplessly at Ruby while he awaited her explanation.

"Get out of town," she said. "You'll never relax here. You don't know how."

"Where would I go?" he said. "Just a few days? You suggest a place, since you're the doctor."

"Somewhere in the country," Ruby said. "Anywhere at all. You need some sun, and some fresh air, and maybe even a sea breeze. Why don't you go down to Maine, and see if that island is still where you left it?"

He didn't even have to stop to think about that idea. Somehow, in his present mood, to hear it was to like it. Sentimental pilgrimage . . .

He went by train the following night. He descended from the train at North Trimble at 6 o'clock in the morning, sniffing the champagne air ecstatically, and not even yawning. He had never seen this station before—it was 13 miles inland, and he had left by sea—and yet it looked familiar. He was already home. The village of North Trimble lay beyond a hill, invisible, here there was only this small wooden station, rather like a matchbox with a roof on it, set like a cabin in the midst of woods and fields.

He could smell the fields, the fresh earth in the neighboring garden in which a farmer was already working, this early in the morning; he could smell the spruce trees, and pine lumber, and the mud of marshes, and the salt tang of the sea; he could hear birds. Standing alone there on the platform among his city luggage, with his feet spread wide, his knuckles on his hips, his hat pushed to the back of his head, he looked excitedly around him and made a sound of gladness in his throat. He swooped down suddenly, and picked a blade of meadow grass growing beside the platform, unsheathed it, and put the sweet end into his mouth and let it hang there. Nibbling it, he went to find the stationmaster.

"Morning," he said, "Got to get to Channel Harbor. Stage be along here pretty soon? She due?"

The stationmaster considered carefully. "She's due," he admitted. "No tellin' when she'll be along. Sometimes she gits here, an' sometimes she don't. She aint no stage. Not what you could rightly call a stage. She's more like what you'd call an automobile."

"Oh, so?"

It was so. What finally arrived was an antediluvian Ford with rattling curtains and a steming radiator cap, driven by a gangling youth in a white shirt and a stiff collar, no tie, a derby hat, and khaki pants. The driver was a kind of errand boy for everyone along his route; and the procedure of his vehicle through the countryside, over the 13 miles, was almost as sociable and almost as leisurely as though the vehicle were still horsedrawn. The driver knew no one on Mitchell's Island, never had been there, he said; and Hobey knew few people on the mainland.

At the pier in Channel Harbor he looked for island boats among the many clustered around the float, but he recognized none of them, and finally he engaged someone to row him over. He supposed he shouldn't try to row himself, so soon after his operation; though he felt rather like a sissy not to. He sat in his city clothes in the stern, watching the island draw near . . .

It was low time at Mitchell's wharf, and it seemed to him there was more eelgrass than there used to be. There were a lot of kids swarming around — they might have been the same kids, but of course they weren't; they were a new crop, in the same faded rags of clothes. He landed at the long ladder, green and precarious near the bottom with slime and seaweed; carrying his bag in one hand he went up, as spryly as he could. They were all watching—the kids and everybody else around. He knew the adults were all watching, by the way their backs were turned.

The path led up the hill behind the wharf, and he followed its wavering route, his shoes slipping on the smooth patches of rock along the way . . . Nothing was as far as he remembered it, and everything was smaller; and there seemed to have been no building or even repairing since he left, and very little painting either, by the looks of things. The small window-eyes of the houses regarded him as he passed, and sometimes the cotton curtains twitched . . . He met grown people he knew, who recognized him without surprise. "Hobey," they said in greeting. As though they'd seen him yesterday.

Men of few words, they nodded and went on about their occasions.

His own house looked better than some of the others. He had kept sending them money, at fairly regular intervals through all these years—not only when they asked for it, but at other times when he happened to think of it. He had never sent them much, but a little went a long way here. He saw now that they had painted the house within the past year or two, and that the roof had been reshingled fairly recently. "Why, it's a palace," he said to himself.

There was never any use trying the front doors of island houses. He went around to the back door and pushed it open and stepped in. He was immediately assailed by the odor of home, which was at once familiar and surprising—had it always been as stuffy as this, with the winds of the world blowing free outside? The windows were never opened, only the door. One of his sisters—Mary, this must be Mary—was at the stove. His brother Joe was sitting cross-legged on the floor, playing with some spools, like an old dreadful child. He did not recognize Hobey—but of course not. He never had.

Hobey said, "Hello, Mary."

She turned, holding a frying pan in her hand, and gaped at him in a stunned silence—then she rallied, and set the frying pan down, and wiped her hands, and greeted him with the typical island matter-of-factness. "Well, hi," she said. "It's Hobey." And then, "My, you gave me quite a turn."

He was amused to see how much she looked like himself—and this was no compliment, because she was very plain. The features that made a seemly enough young man made a big-faced, rather masculine-looking girl. Her hair was in wisps, and she was wearing a faded cotton dress, patched under the arms; and she was barelegged in large brown sneakers, through the toe of one of which her own big toes protruded. Surveying her with friendly compassion, Hobey saw a lifelong dependent. "Nobody's ever going to marry this one," he told himself.

The musical comedy has been developed almost exclusively by the English-speaking peoples.

DEDUCTIONS FOR CONTRIBUTIONS (PART 2)

Contributions and gifts which re allowable deductions for Federal income tax purposes must be of a character falling within the limitations set by law. The law defines five categories of contributions which are allowable as deductions to individuals up to 15 per cent of the net income computed before the deduction is made:

(1) Contributions to or for the use of the United States or any of its political subdivisions or possessions, provided the contributions are to be used solely for public purposes, are deductible. If a contribution is for the benefit of the donor, however, and not for public purposes, such a contribution would not be deductible.

(2) Contributions made to a corporation, trust, community chest, fund, or foundation created or organized in the United States or any of its possessions or under the law of the United States or of any of its possessions or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory or of any possession of the United States, no part of the earnings of which inures to the benefit of any individual, and no substantial part of the activities of which is attempting to influence legislation, and which is organized and operated exclusively for one or more of the following purposes: (a) charitable, (b) religious, (c) educational, (d) scientific, (e) prevention of cruelty to animals or children, are deductible.

Such organizations would include the Red Cross, Community Chests, the U. S. O., the British War Relief Society, Inc., and other war relief organizations if organized in the United States. Religious contributions would include all contributions and assessments paid to religious groups, including pew rents, and church "assessments" and "dues." Contributions for educational purposes would include those made to nonprofit schools and universities, Boy Scouts, the D. A. R., and like organizations, and to other nonprofit educational organizations. Contributions to organizations for scientific purposes would include nonprofit research foundations and other nonprofit domestic organizations engaged in research.

(3) Contributions are also deductible if made to a domestic fraternal society operating under the lodge system, but only if the contributions are to be used for one of the purposes listed above. Dues and membership fees in such societies are not deductible.

(4) Contributions made to organizations of United States war veterans and auxiliaries are deductible if such organizations, units, or societies are organized in the United States or any American possession, and if no part of the net earnings of the organization is for the benefit of any private shareholder or individual.

In addition to contributions of the character indicated above, certain other contributions are allowable, as a business expense, to a taxpayer engaged in trade or business, if the contribution is in furtherance of his trade or business. Such contributions would include donations to a chamber of commerce or to trade associations, if such contributions are in general furtherance of one's trade or business, and are not for the purpose of influencing legislation.

A contribution may be made in money or property, but if in property, then the amount of the contribution is measured by the fair market value of the property at the time of the contribution.

In preparing a Federal income tax return the amount shown in item 12 for contributions must be supported by a schedule showing the names of the organizations to which the contributions were made and the amounts contributed.

MANSFIELD BUSINESS IN REVIEW

Portrayer of Popular Cartoon Is Associate of Coleman Todd

Artist Photographer For Local Firm Draws Lubri-Kate.

Lubri-Kate is quite a girl. She's a winsome cartoon, brainchild of Duane Darling, artist-photographer for Coleman Todd and Associates, 248 Park Avenue West.

Lubri-Kate has adorned a blotter put out each month for the past ten years by The Ohio Grease Company of Loudonville.

E. W. Beardsley, secretary-treasurer of that company is responsible for a bit of spicily written verse appearing on the blotter which subtly combines seasonal topics with advertising copy and is signed by Lubri-Kate.

It was in August, 1932 that Duane Darling submitted the first drawings of Lubri-Kate to The Ohio Grease Company. Since then Darling has drawn Lubri-Kate for that organization 127 times in every conceivable garb and guise . . . each an original idea of Darling's, tying in cleverly with the company's copy on lubrication service.

Mr. Darling has used a singular technique in giving Lubri-Kate a truly individual personality.

She's a purely imaginative creature, not drawn from a model but nevertheless popular with hundreds of Ohio Grease company customers . . . and Mr. Darling's most avid interest and arresting hobby.

Duane Darling has been employed by Coleman Todd and Associates for the past 14 years where he exhibits his talent in art and commercial photography for countless Coleman Todd advertising accounts.

Coleman Todd offers a complete advertising service including copy writing, layout, art and photography, following through on an idea from its origin to its publication.

The company has operated under the name of Coleman Todd and Associates since March 1, 1931. P. J. Linster is accountant and manager of the firm in the absence of Coleman Todd who is now in Texas serving with the U. S. Army as Lieutenant Colonel. Other members of the organization are E. A. O'Dell, executive vice president; Donald Lathrop, art director; William Todd, salesman; Lois McLaughlin, receptionist.

Duane Darling, artist photographer for Coleman Todd and Associates, 248 Park avenue west, is shown with reproductions of "Lubri-Kate," a drawing he has made each month for the past ten years for the Ohio Grease company of Loudonville.

RECORD SALES INCREASE IN LOCAL SHOPS

All Makes of Needles Stocked By Smart's Complete Music Store.

Interest in record playing among people of all ages is definitely on the increase. So that the question, not only of what records to buy, but what needle to select, arises.

Smart's modern music shop, constantly on the lookout for what's new in the world of music and in constant touch with music companies, is in a position to give expert advice concerning what needles are best to use for each particular purpose.

From the ordinary needle, made of surgical steel, to the Star Sapphire, which is a real jewel, Smart's Music Shop stocks them all and Eugene Smart is prepared to aid his customers in selecting the needle they need for best results.

Among the needles available at Smart's are the Kacti and Greythorne, Victor and Columbia. Among the permanent needles are the Fidelitone, the Walco Floating Jewel and the Pfanstiehl.

The secret of the amazing performance of this new kind of needle lies in the TIP of patented Pfanstiehl Alloy . . . a union of rare and precious metals more costly than platinum and with an atomic grain structure so microscopically fine and tenacious that long wear only adds to its high polish and burnished smoothness.

That's why, even after thousands of plays, it glides so sweetly along the record grooves, with never a gouge or scratch to mar the music or harm the record, and why it will so unfailingly bring out those little, hidden tonal shadings that most needles miss.

MUSIC STUDY CLUB TO HAVE SUNDAY PROGRAM

Miss Evelyn Gilbert to Act as Commentator at Meeting In St. John's Evangelical Church at 4 P. M.; To Discuss Composers.

THE THREE B's" will be the subject of the Mansfield Music Study club when it meets tomorrow at the St. Johns Evangelical and Reformed church at 4 p. m. Miss Evelyn Gilbert will act as commentator.

The first of the three composers, who will be discussed, is Bach, who produced a great quantity of work, and who had an enormous influence on the development of music. His most famous pieces were written for the organ, but he also wrote for the violin and clavier. Beethoven's compositions include nine symphonies, among them one choral symphony. He was the son of a professional singer, and as a child showed extraordinary genius.

The third and last composer is the famed Brahms, who combined philosophy with romanticism in his creative ability. He produced masterpieces, and although he never attempted opera, he excelled in all other forms of music.

Miss Gilbert has spent much time in the country of the three composers and will have with her special records that she has brought back. Selections of Brahms will be played by Mrs. Marie Porterfield, and the sopranos, Miss Florence MacDonald and Mrs. Ruth Secrist will sing compositions of Beethoven and Bach.

All members are urged to be present at this meeting. In the absence of Mrs. Eleanor Smith, the program will be under the direction of Mrs. Edith Jameson.

By ADELE GARRISON

Halloran, pausing first as if wishing to be sure of his ground, said "Yes, I am sure I would know it anywhere."

The fugitive young king rose abruptly to his feet

"Will you please excuse me for a minute," he said, and at my nod he walked into the bedroom emerging a few seconds later with a leather wallet.

A thick fold of the leather formed one edge and as Georges' fingers fumbled with it I guessed that the fold hid a secret spring This guess was confirmed as the fold slipped aside revealing a zipper fastening which Georges opened. From within he took several cards to show to Halloran

Compares Signatures

"Please look carefully at these signatures of mine" he said "and compare them mentally with the signature attached to that piece of a letter which you saw."

Halloran studied the cards meticulously, then lifted his eyes to Georges, standing tensely over him.

"They are the same" he said

"Were there any other marks on that sheet of paper?" Georges asked.

"That same name, Georges Minot, was written all over it," Halloran answered slowly. "Every one was an attempt to copy the name on the letter, and some of them were very good copies."

"What did you do with the sheet of paper?" my father asked abruptly.

"I put it back in the desk as quickly as I could cross the room" Halloran replied. "then shut the desk and hurried back to my chair I was just in time, too for the man came back a second after I sat down."

After a long silence my father spoke again.

"Well," he said, "we have plenty of time to stop any deviltry at your bank, Georges" Then he turned to me.

"Will you please give Georges a few sheets of note paper, a pencil and a magazine on which to rest the paper?" he requested.

From my desk I brought the articles my father had named but Georges barely had time to say "thank you" before my father was speaking to him again.

Spencer Ready to Act.

"Please write down in full the names of the two men at the bank you know, then write at the bottom of the sheet: 'Please come to me at once,' and sign it 'Georges Minot.'"

'This is not Trees," said Georges in astonishment. "Those men are high officials in a big bank I cannot order them to come to me."

"You are not ordering them,' my father said, in the patient tone of a teacher explaining an arithmetic problem to a stupid pupil You are asking them and I think your request backed by my explanation will bring them here within the hour."

"I beg your pardon," Georges said flushing. "I had forgotten your power."

"Not my power," my father said, "but the power behind me can be very effective. And there is no need for you to beg my pardon, dear boy."

His tone was indulgently absolving as he stood over Georges, who was busily writing on a sheet of the note paper I had given him My father took it when finished and went toward my bedroom door

"Now for my messenger," he said.

"The Authority on Authorities"

A WAY TO MEASURE

Regardless of what method you employ to count up the strength of your hands for No Trump bids, it will pay you to use the old 4-3-2-1 count for another purpose —deciding when to open a bordering hand in fourth position when you lack very much distributional value. Counting an ace at 4, king at 3, queen at 2 and J at 1, an average hand adds to 10. The question of how much above that you need to open depends on whether your hand is mainly of major suit cards, or of minors.

Notice that South has a total count of 14, which is equal to an ace above average With that much strength, it will pay in the long run to open fourth-hand even when a majority of your cards are in the minor suits, as in this case. In the major suits, you can shade it down to about 12, and, with very fine major suit length it will pay you 10 and, in rare cases, even less.

After East led the club 2, North made his game, with four tricks in that suit, two in hearts, two in diamonds and one in spades. In fact, that identical same game would have been in the cards if South had held the club Q instead of the K. East having the latter. In that event, South would have possessed a count of only 13, yet enough to produce a game opposite North's maximum pass.

Harry Yockey, sports editor of the Canton Repository, wants the high school coaches of his district to come out of the woods and quit taking sniping pot-shots at Dale Haverstock, star cager of the Canton McKinley Bulldogs.

He accuses the snipers of Japanese slant-eyed tactics by pecking away behind trees, and refusing to come out in the open.

Yockey wants the snipers to file formal protests on Haverstock's eligibility as a high school athlete, and have the question settled once and for all.

From Yockey's review of the case, it seems that Haverstock's name appeared in the lineup of a team in a non-scholastic basketball tournament at Akron last spring.

Haverstock's participation in the tournament would have been a violation of the high school rules, but the Bulldog star denies having played in the tourney.

There seem to be a lot of clippings with the tournament lineup in the hands of Canton district coaches, saved from way last spring, and some of these clippings were mailed to Larry Brown, president of the district board of the Ohio High School Athletic association, and were forwarded by Brown to Athletic Commissioner J. R. Townsend. But Brown says no protests were filed.

"Almost a year has passed since the Akron tournament," says Yockey, "and if any protest is filed against Haverstock at this late date it certainly would constitute shabby sportsmanship, and that's putting it mildly."

Yockey continues: "Even if a protest were registered, Commissioner Townsend's hands would be tied, and he could do nothing else but dismiss the charges, judging from his ruling in the controversy last fall which involved Johnny Stojack, brilliant Steubenville high footballer.

"Stojack admittedly accepted money last summer for playing baseball with a semi-pro steel company team. That probably is the worst violation of the state's high school athletic code. Yet Townsend ruled that Stojack would be eligible to play football with the Big Red if he returned the money he was paid for playing baseball. Stojack complied with the requirements and became one of the state's outstanding gridders last year."

Yockey shouldn't be too surprised by the Stojack ruling. It came right on the heels of Townsend's discovery that Massillon's Pokey Blunt was under 20 years of age when he played football for the Tigers in the fall of 1941.

When Pokey spilled the beans about giving his age as 21 when he applied for a marriage license.

Meanwhile, maybe the Haverstock case will be cleaned up or settled a natural death by the time the Bulldogs play here Feb. 26.

Hahn's 22 Points Spark Tygers To 42-37 Victory Over Fremont

Mansfield Breaks Last Quarter Tie To Overcome Little Giants

By WALLY DAVIS

SPARKED by Dean Hahn, who went on a 22-point scoring spree, Mansfield high Tygers bounced back into the victory column last night with a 42 to 37 win over Fremont Ross Little Giants on the Fremont court.

The contest was another of those nerve-racking affairs, with the Tygers forced to break a tie in the last quarter to edge out the verdict.

The Red and White took a 5-0 lead early in the opening frame when Bob Baker tallied on a free toss and a lay up, and Doug Myers hit from under the bucket. But then the Little Giants started to roll, counting seven straight points to jump into the lead. Les Myers got a free toss for Mansfield making it 7 to 6, but Porczak, who scored seven points in this stanza, hit on a lay-up as the period ended with the Tygers trailing, 9 to 6.

The Little Giants increased their lead to 15-8 in the early part of the second stanza. Then Hahn and Andy Lamoreux took command and the Tygers cut loose with an 18-point rally.

Hahn, held scoreless in the first period, came back with 10 in this spree while Lamoreux got his evening's total of seven. Fremont counted 11 markers in the second, and the Tygers led, 24 to 20, at halftime.

Mansfield was outscored, 8-9, in the third stanza. Brocksieker dropped in a long shot to start the period. Hahn continued his hot pace, tossing in a pair of buckets. Porczak hit for Fremont and it was 28-24, Mansfield.

Brocksieker scored on a free throw. Hahn whipped in his third basket of the period, but Brocksieker came right back with a side shot to make it 30-27. Baker and Porczak scored for their respective teams as the quarter closed.

The fourth frame resembled that hectic one at Ashland Tuesday night, but this time the Tygers were on the right side of the score.

Bingham cut Mansfield's lead to 32-30 when he caged a free toss. Russ McBride and Baker countered with free ones for the Tygers. Bingham fired one in from underneath and the Tygers took time out. Robitski tied the score with a push shot. Then Mr. Hahn took control again, laying in two quick under-the-bucket shots to put Mansfield in front, 38 to 34.

Robitski got a free throw but Hahn split the cords again, this time from the side. Bingham scored on a lay-up to make it 40-37. Baker and Les Myers hit from the foul line to give the Tygers their five-point margin.

Mansfield turned in a shooting average of 30 per cent, making good on 16 of 53 tries. They hit on 10 of 19 free throw attempts for a 53 per cent mark.

Twenty-nine personal fouls were called, 16 against Fremont and 13 against the Tygers, with two players, McBride of Mansfield, and R. Myers of Fremont, ejected.

It was Mansfield's fifth win in seven games against possible district tournament opposition. The Tygers had previously beaten Willard, Norwalk and Bellevue. They broke even in two games with Ashland and lost to Elyria.

Cage Streaks Put on Line

Indiana and Illinois Expect Easy Games.

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—The Big Ten's two outstanding basketball teams, Indiana and Illinois, attempt to prolong brilliant winning streaks tonight when they meet second division opponents in the outstanding games of the conference program.

Indiana faces Michigan at Bloomington, while the co-feature sends Illinois against Ohio State at Columbus. The other league engagements pit Minnesota against Chicago and Purdue against Northwestern. In non-conference contests Iowa entertains Knox and Great Lakes tangles with Wisconsin.

Indiana and Illinois have held a monopoly on the Big Ten lead since the outset of the campaign. The Hoosiers now are in front with six straight triumphs and Illinois is a step behind with five in a row. Both leaders are top-heavy favorites tonight.

Playing on its home floor where it has lost but two Conference games in five seasons, Indiana is expected to have an easy time with a Michigan quintet woefully lacking in scoring punch.

Indiana appears to face an easier assignment than Illinois does when it tangles with Ohio State. The Bucks have a league record of two triumphs against three losses.

The Ohio State team is extremely erratic as its recent series with Purdue indicates. The Bucks won the first game, 34 to 32, and then dropped the second, 56 to 38.

* * *

With the return of forward Ken Menke to regular action, Illinois has a starting team on which every member is a dangerous scorer. Ohio States only consistent point-maker has been Freddie Miller, veteran forward. Miller leads the Buck scorers with 49 points.

Loris Again Hits High Barnes Total

Sportsmen Study Wartime Problems

COLUMBUS —(INS)— The League of Ohio Sportsmen will discuss how best to maintain opportunities for hunting and fishing at its midwinter conference in Columbus today and tomorrow, according to League Secretary Tudor Wilson.

Those persons who advocate a ban on hunting and fishing for the duration, said Wilson, "have not thought the problem through clearly."

Dodds Favored In Mile Race

Millrose Games Open Indoor Track Season.

NEW YORK—(UP)—Athletes from 17 states and 36 colleges open the indoor track campaign in the Millrose games at Madison Square Garden tonight with interest centered on the crowning of a new mile king.

Galloping Gil Dodds, the Boston divinity student who a year ago was a virtual unknown, was favored to succeed Leslie MacMitchell as ruler of the eight-furlong flock. Winner of only one major mile event, Dodds ruled choice in a field of seven seeking first claim to the abandoned title.

A previous 4:08.7 performance and the claim of Coach Jack Ryder that his protege could better the indoor competitive mile mark of 4:07.4 before the end of the season installed the bespectacled Dodds as the favorite. MacMitchell gave up the coveted crown to accept a navy commission.

Five of the candidates moved down from the two-mile route, disgusted by the long-time domination of Greg Rice of Notre Dame.

The ambitious quintet included Dodds, Walt Mehl of Wisconsin, one-time Big Ten two-mile champion; Leroy Schwarzkopf of Yale, Jim Rafferty of the New York A. C., and Frank Dixon, NYU cross-country champion. Completing the field of hopefuls are Earl Mitchell, a previous victor over Dodds, and Don Burnham, one-time conqueror of MacMitchell.

In two other featured events Rice seeks his 57th consecutive two-mile triumph and Cornelius Warmerdam, the cloud-busting Californian school teacher, attemps to better his indoor pole vault mark of 15 feet, 7-1/4 inches.

* * *

Jimmy Herbert of NYU tries for his fifth victory in the Mel Sheppard 600 against such keen competition as Georgetown's Hugh Short, Michigan's Bob Ufer and Ohio State's Russ Owen.

LaMotta Ends Sugar Streak

16-Pound Advantage Defeats Robinson.

DETROIT —(AP)— Jolting Jacob La Motta, young New York middleweight, is open to the schoolboy challenge, "pick on someone your size," but there was nothing questionable about his ten-round decision last night that shattered Ray (Sugar) Robinson's sensational winning streak at 129 fights, including 40 in the pro ring.

A 1 to 3 underdog, La Motta carried a 16-pound weight advantage into the Olympia stadium ring and came out with a unanimous verdict over the previously unbeaten fellow New Yorker before an overflow crowd of 18,930 that set a Michigan indoor record. La Motta weighed 160½.

Referee Sam Hennessy gave La Motta five rounds, Robinson four and called one even, and the two judges backed him up.

By squaring accounts with Robinson at one victory each, La Motta opened the way for a rubber match to be fought here before his Negro rival marches off to war. Matchmaker Nick Londes said the date might be Feb. 26.

Robinson drew some $15,000 of last night's $50,000 gross gate, with La Motta getting $10,000.

Gray Held to Two Buckets

State Scoring Leader Flops In Home Town.

(By Associated Press)

He was robbed! And in his home town, too!

Wyndol Gray, the Bowling Green basketball flash and leading Ohio scorer this season, was held to a pair of baskets last night as Akron's Zippers defeated the Bee-Gees, 47 to 38.

Until last night, Gray's game average was 25 points and he never had tallied fewer than 17 a contest. But the Zippers got out the handcuffs for Gray's homecoming and he scored only four points to make his total 457 for 19 games, an average of 24 points.

Gray has three more games in which to better the 532 points totaled last season by Bob Gerber, another Akron product and former Toledo U. sharpshooter ranked among the best 1941-42 college cagers. The Bee-Gees entertain Grosse Ile navy next Tuesday, Heidelberg Friday and journey to Dayton Feb. 13 to end their season.

Muskingum cagers were set down, 69 to 53, by Mount Union at Alliance in an Ohio conference fray.

At Oxford Miami bested Oberlin, 54 to 48.

Rio Grande, which won its first game of the season last Saturday, topped Marietta, 43 to 40, at Rio Grande.

Armstrong Paces Ideal Electrics

Jack Wins on Foul Punch

NEW YORK —(AP)— Even when the dice are hottest, a cagy crapshooter will never press his luck too far, which is a tip Beau Jack, the Georgia Jackrabbit, should study carefully.

The Beau took a ten-round decision over Warhorse Fritzie Zivic in Madison Square Garden last night by the slim margin of one body punch which only referee Young Otto and one or two others in the sell-out crowd of 21,240 thought was a "foul." And since the little ex-shoeshine boy had that much trouble disposing of a slowed-up Fritzie Zivic, he should think more than twice before pressing his luck against Henry Armstrong, a thing he is planning to do about April 2.

DESCRIBES NEW U. S. BATTLESHIP

buckled. But I could still hear, and the "cease firing" command sounded very good indeed.

Later, when I described my reactions to an officer, he remarked: "Why, that was a mild blast; we didn't fire a full charge."

Originally publicized as a 35,000-tonner, one of the six vessels of the North Carolina class, this battlewagon fully loaded comes closer to being 41,000 tons. She is unquestionably a more powerful fighting craft than any of her sisters.

The experts aboard have told me that this ship can hurl more steel at one time than any known vessel now in service. Her main battery is composed of three turrets, each mounting three 16-inch rifles. Her secondary armament includes 10 armored gun mounts, each holding two five-inch guns that are equally effective against air and surface craft.

Supplementing anti-aircraft armanent includes potent 40-mm Bofors guns and rapid-firing 20-mm Oerlikon weapons. Mounts are available for additional Oerlikins.

Intensive, steady drill is welding the crew of approximately 2,000 men into a well-integrated fighting unit.

"These boys are young, eager to fight for their country, but they lack experience," the ship's executive officer said. "They've done surprisingly well already, and I am confident that when and if the time comes to go into action, the crew will not be found wanting."

This new dreadnaught is a fast ship despite her expansive beam and therefore offers a difficult target for submarines. Just what her top speed is cannot be revealed. Steam-turbine driven, her four engines can produce an estimated 115,000 horsepower.

This ship is shorter but beamier than her sisters. Her overall length of 680 feet is slightly shorter than the North Carolina.

COSTS WORLD HALF TRILLION

Hitler Plunges Nations Into Expenditures Trebling Those of World War I.

000,000 and Italy $8,000,000,000.

There is yet another consideration, Wellstone points out: the serious loss of income caused by Hitlerite occupation of European nations "unquestionably exceeds $10,000,000,000."

The cost of the war, thus far, as Wellstone has worked it out, comes to more than $400,000,000,000. But that's only the beginning —"assuming that another year may pass before Hitler's downfall" and figuring in only the announced budgets of Britain and the U. S., more than $500,000,000,000 will be spent in all, he says.

This, of course, does not take into account all the money spent to fight Hitler's partner, the Japanese, nor by the Japanese to win their empire. Nor does the half trillion total include money spent by neutrals worried over Hitlerite threats to to their neutrality, by other members of the United Nations, and by Hitler satellites like Rumania, Hungary and Finland.

And, says Wellstone, "the human cost of Hitler can never be estimated,"—the cost in suffering, privation, death and destitution.

Now do you know why you'll have to pay that income tax?

$500 WINNER

West Fourth Street Woman Gets Bank Night Split.

Mrs. William Schultz 98 West Fourth street was the only winner in the theater bank night award program last night when the total sum of $1,900 was divided for awards.

Mrs. Schultz received one of the three $500 awards set up after the person whose name was drawn for the full amount, $1,900, was not in the theater nor was she registered for that particular drawing. The other award was for $500.

The policy plan for awarding the $1,500 total next week, has not yet been established Frank Harpster, district manager of the Warner Brothers' theaters said today. It may either be presented as a whole or divided into three $500 awards, he said.

RUMORS FLYING ABOUT PORTUGAL

Churchill Visit to Lisbon Hinted as Troops Mass at Border.

celebration on the anniversary of Malaga's "liberation" during the Spanish civil war, according to CBS.

Portuguese officials were quoted by the Berlin report as saying that a visit by Mr. Churchill would be a surprise but that it was "not impossible."

The British prime minister was last known to be in Tripoli where he arrived yesterday for a visit with the victorious British Eighth army. He left Tripoli by plane early Friday for an unannounced destination, Cairo dispatches reported.

The purpose of a visit to Lisbon by the prime minister at this time was not clear to London observers. But there was nothing obscure about the welter of German reports.

Hitler and his intelligent agents were caught flat-footed by the announcement that Mr. Churchill and President Roosevelt had held a 10-day conference at Casablanca, and they were also napping when the British leader appeared suddenly in Turkey for the meetings that strengthened Allied ties with that country.

Spain and Portugal are the only remaining countries in Europe which he might visit with profit for the United Nations cause, and the reich does not want to be caught unawares again. So the Berlin rumor factory is playing it safe by sending the much-travelled Mr. Churchill to Portugal—and then having the group of Spanish leaders go there to meet him.

Where's Churchill? It's Military Secret

CAIRO —(INS)— The whereabouts of Prime Minister Winston Churchill became a "military secret" again today following his departure early Friday from Tripoli for an undisclosed destination.

Mr. Churchill arrived in Tripoli Wednesday personally to thank the officers and men of the British Eighth Army for sweeping the Afrika Korps and its Italian allies out of Egypt and Libya.

His plane, presumably the big American Liberator which has carried him on most of his history-making trips, took off from Tripoli with its destination a mystery except for those aboard.

The Churchill plane landed at Castel Benito airdrome late Wednesday. After debarking the prime minister, speaking from the top of a small hill, paid his tribute to the men of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery.

He said he had come to thank them "in the name of the king, the British government and the whole people.

"Your deeds as fighting men will gleam and glow in the annals of history," Mr. Churchill declared.

Then, accompanied by Gen. Alexander, Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the imperial staff, and Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, Allied commander for the middle east, Mr. Churchill went by automobile to Tripoli.

JAP SQUADRON HALVED BY U. S.

Yanks Down 17 Torpedo Planes as They Strike at Ships In Two Day Raid.

nese aircraft brought down during this night attack.

The enemy attacked in two waves, each made up of 12 planes. They appeared to be dropping bombs, when suddenly the men aboard the warships saw the "tin fish" streaking toward them.

The anti-aircraft guns went into action instantly and threw a protecting screen of fire over the area. Two enemy planes flew directly over one ship and ran squarely into the chattering fire of its guns. Both went flaming to the sea.

One ship, in flames, zoomed across the deck of a warship, narrowly missing the superstructure, and crashed nearby. The warship steamed rapidly out of the glow of the burning plane.

The following afternoon the Japanese attacked again. A lone American patrol plane, a PBY flying boat, spotted the formation and made a heroic attempt to disperse it.

But the enemy swept on and dropped their missiles while still at great distance. Then they continued their runs over our vessels in strafing attacks.

American fighter planes got up and a series of dogfights followed. The fighters shot down six of the Japanese bombers. The anti-aircraft batteries on our warships accounted for the other five, so that not a single Japanese plane got back to its base.

Tighten Grip On Guadalcanal

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Supported from distant skies and nearby seas by concerted stabs at Japanese reinforcements, American ground forces tightened their grip on Guadalcanal today while the sea-air struggle for control of the strategic Solomons islands raged throughout the southwestern Pacific.

Defends Secrecy On Pacific 'Battle'

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON —A week-long series of skirmishes between the American and Japanese fleets in the Solomon island area of the South Pacific has been shrouded in secrecy for "justifiable reasons of strategy," OWI Director Elmer Davis announced today.

Davis corroborated navy communiques of the past week which threw down Japanese claims of sinking eight warships, merely credited the enemy with making a major effort to regain the Solomons, denied that a battle was raging and admitted that both sides have suffered losses.

Asserting that both sides still were sparring Davis added:

"I have talked with Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the fleet, and Secretary of the Navy Knox and there are justifiable reasons of strategy for not saying anything at this time.

"It is still a case of striking out with your left again and again, feeling the enemy out. They are still sparring."

The OWI director admitted, however, that if the present situation continues much longer it will become necessary for the navy department to issue what he termed "a progress report."

Yank Bombs Smash Three Jap Ships

UNITED NATIONS HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA —(INS)—Heavy bombers of the command of Gen. Douglas MacArthur destroyed or heavily damaged three Japanese ships in a smashing raid on the naval base of Amboina, northwest of New Guinea, it was reported today in a communique.

Widespread raids on shipping, airfields and supply stations also were disclosed in the bulletin.

One 10,000-ton transport was heavily hit and was left aflame from bow to stern, said the communique. Two smaller vessels of 5,000 tons each received direct hits.

Rabaul, on New Britain island east of New Guinea, was bombed in the seventh consecutive night attack which was preceded by a harassing raid that lasted three hours.

U. S.-FINNISH ACCORD SEEN

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— An improvement in American-Finnish relations was indicated today.

President Roosevelt left the way open for the return to Helsinki of the American minister, H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld, when he said yesterday that so far as he knew Schoenfeld would be going back to Finland.

The president's statement at his press conference was important not so much as it pertained to Schoenfeld's return but because it showed that this government has not closed the door on a resumption of more active diplomacy in Finland.

Winds Up Affairs With FBI Tonight, Settles Rumors On Change of Plans.

Jan. 18 revised this to ask for only 30 days of leave, during which time he would wind up his affairs with the FBI. He had intended to return to his post here Friday but learned his presence would be required at a bureau conference tonight.

Bates' first return was almost coincident with the death of Chief Thomas M. Bell who directed the department during the first year's leave. Since Jan. 19 the department has been in charge of Captain John Miller, senior officer and assistant chief.

Fearing that disability arising during a leave period would imperil his seniority and pension rights or possible benefits accruing to his family, Bates said recently his return to the chief's post appeared to be his only logical course.
